FARM SESSION TO AWAIT CHOICE OF NEW SECRETARY

(By Associated Press.)

The investigation and proposed preliminary agricultural conference, but he does not plan to give much consideration to the problem of making a selection before tomorrow, when burial services for the late secretary will be held in Des Moines, Ia.
Among those already mentioned for the office in official circles here are Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois; John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota agricultural college, who has been selected to serve on the proposed agricultural commission; and Samuel Hays, publisher and former president of the Agricultural Editors' association.

get our money in regular monthly payments for four years and seven months," said Mr. Cunningham. "Should the firm go into the hands of a receiver, there would be a possibility of loss to the city."

Upon motion of Councilman George A. Jacobs, the traffic company's proposal was accepted and it was announced that the city would make efforts to discount the note at one of the banks.

Heavens are granted. The Hanley & Murphy and Cori Celp companies, 202 North High street, were granted licenses to deal in foodstuffs and delicatessen were granted John Roman, 267 West Milwaukee street, and Anlos Paris, 421 West Milwaukee street.

Hospital Ask Money.
With obligations falling due on Nov. 15, Mayor Jackson is desirous of getting the $1,000 appropriation from the city for 1925 paid in advance. City Manager Traxler said he believed the matter could be handled through one of the banks, the city to make the payment on Jan. 1 so as to conform with the year's bookkeeping with the next year's accounts. President William McNe brought up the question in response to an appeal from one of the sisters at the hospital, pointing out that a similar arrangement was carried out last year.

President McNe requested the city manager to see what could be done toward moving a hydrant located in a driveway in front of the Fox Wagner property, Mineral Point avenue and North Franklin street. Councilman George A. Jacobs and B. M. Palmer were assigned to attend a meeting called by Supt. P. G. Holt for 5 p. m. Wednesday to make plans for educational week.

No action was taken on the election of a successor to J. K. Jensen, former councilman.

NUTMEG STATE IS SAFE FOR COOLIDGE

President Will Carry Connecticut by a Large Plurality.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1924, by the Janesville Gazette-Special Correspondence to the Janesville Gazette.

Hartford, Conn.—Out west state after state showed a distinct friendliness for the McAdoo cause and democratic leaders said it had been nominated.

The democratic party would not be third. Here in Connecticut is the other side of the story. Had Al Smith been nominated this would have been a doubtful state.

The democracy of Connecticut is not exactly what it used to be. That would imply something deliberate. Far from it.

The democracy of Connecticut have been disheartened, and while the leaders and organization workers are laboring to pull a good democratic vote for the state, the rank and file are dividing as between La Follette and Coolidge.

The conservative democrats are turning to the latter because they cannot swallow Bryan on the vice presidential end of the national ticket. Other democrats, especially from the ranks of labor, are planning to vote for La Follette.

Opinions vary as to the probable size of the La Follette vote in this state but most of it will come from the democratic party anyhow. So far as affecting the result the figures will have only an academic value.

Davis in Nutmeg State.
Talking with some well informed persons from Waterbury, a democratic stronghold, the writer was assured that Davis would run stronger than Cox did four years ago. This might still be true and yet the totals in the state he lost last time. Comparisons between the Cox and Davis votes will be difficult to make for the temptation is to add the La Follette and Davis vote together to get an idea of what the non-Coolidge vote really is, but one cannot be sure how many republicans, especially among the working men, will have voted for La Follette.

Al Smith Strong.
Al Smith meant something to the democracy of Connecticut. Labor would have been solid for him. The "wet" sentiment, which is by no means negligible, would have been his. This is one of the states which has no particular objection to Davis.

In fact he is admired by those who have really studied his career, but the masses look upon him somewhat as they do on an aristocrat—someone apart from them. His advocacy of the League of Nations remains for him, of course, a large number of women voters who feel they must constantly strive to support that cause irrespective of whether it triumphs immediately or in the years to come. But among the democrats of Irish extraction there is disaffection because of the league issue. It is not as intense as four years ago. Then all the Irish vote with few exceptions went to Harding as a protest against the possibility of American entrance into a league which was supposed to be obligated to maintain the territorial status quo of Great Britain as against Ireland. Since then the Irish Free State has become a member of the league and therefore at least the members of the league are supposed to help preserve the territorial integrity of the Irish Free State against encroachments by Great Britain.

Irish Opposed to League.
But among the Irish there has been a division anyhow. There are those who sympathize with the movement in Ireland for a republic by de Valera. They are likely to be found voting for La Follette. The sympathizers with the Irish Free state have for the most part returned to the democratic fold, and if they are straying this year it is because of other issues. The league problem may be said, therefore, not to be cutting as much of a figure as it did four years ago.

The democrats have not much hope, however, of carrying through even their state ticket, and it is suggested here and there that nominations were made perfunctorily and without confidence that much could be accomplished. The democrats are, nevertheless, getting interested in the outcome of the special election on Dec. 16 at which a successor to the late Senator Brandegee will be chosen.

Republican organization leaders are at odds with Gov. Tompkins, a republican, for cutting the election, as they had hoped to dictate a choice after the legislature had been convened. A republican can be expected to win the special election unless the schism in the republican ranks leads to the nomination of someone who will alienate the independent vote of the state.

Connecticut is overwhelmingly republican and the majority vote for Coolidge, while probably not as large as Harding received, will be substantial.

It is not exactly what it used to be. That would imply something deliberate. Far from it.

FLOW OF OIL STEADY
Bucharest — The production of crude oil in Rumania during July amounted to approximately 1,160,000 United States barrels. For the first seven months of 1924 crude production has amounted to about 7,000,000 barrels.

Recruiting for the navy has been resumed here, according to F. J. McCarthy, who came here Friday afternoon for the first time, and expects to spend Friday of each week in this city. The same physical examination and other requirements of enlistment are in effect as heretofore, he says. Mr. McCarthy makes his headquarters in the federal building at Madison, and covers enlistees within a radius of 80 miles of there.

Moving pictures were to have been shown in this city illustrating activities of the navy day Oct. 27. Mr. McCarthy states, but the great demand for them has prevented securing them now. They will be shown at a later date.

Among the recent enlistments from this city are Arnold Farlow, 1208 Maple Court, and James Trice, route 1, Janesville. Men now joining are being sent to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station for preliminary work and later given the opportunity to enter one of the navy trade schools.

Opportunity comes every day to the man who believes in himself and goes out and chases after it.

It is best to give the name of the firm or residence, and the name of the person speaking, when answering the telephone.

"Hello" Is Out of Date

"Hello" is a rather ungraceful little word when used to answer the telephone.

The accepted expression now used generally by particular people is to give the name of the firm or residence and the name of the person speaking. For example:

"Smith & Company, Jones speaking"
"Dr. Brown's office, Miss Smith speaking"
"Dawson's residence, Helen Dawson speaking"

This method eliminates the time-wasting, and hence money-losing, exchange of "Hello" and inquiry as to who is speaking.

Those who have adopted the modern practice agree that it is more courteous and more business-like.

DICKIE LOEB'S FATHER DEAD

Thomas Massey, premier of New Zealand, replying to a question regarding the Japanese amendment to the League of Nations protocol, said: "Japanese cannot enter New Zealand, League or no league."

Chicago—Albert Henry Loeb, first vice president of Sears-Roback and co-owner with Nathan Leopold of Robert Franks, died at his home here last night after a long illness.

Nathan Leopold, a physician and physicist, said his death was not hastened by the trial and conviction of his son, now serving a life sentence in Joliet prison. Whether the son would attend the funeral was considered doubtful, for, although the prison authorities always permit prisoners to attend funerals of near relatives, the crowd of curious that would gather made it likely no application would be made.

Mr. Loeb last saw his son May 23, when he was arrested at the Loeb home. The father was stricken May 18, three days before the killing. During the trial Mr. Loeb was taken to the state he lost last time. Comparisons between the Cox and Davis votes will be difficult to make for the temptation is to add the La Follette and Davis vote together to get an idea of what the non-Coolidge vote really is, but one cannot be sure how many republicans, especially among the working men, will have voted for La Follette.

POSTOFFICE GROWS TO BIG BUSINESS

Improvements in Service Under Administration of Cunningham.

J. J. CUNNINGHAM.

After nearly 11 years of service as postmaster of Janesville, during which time some of the great modern changes in mail distribution have come about, Postmaster J. J. Cunningham will next week give place to the new appointee, A. E. Mattheson, and return to the practice of law.

During his administration postal business done through the local office has increased approximately $100,000, receipts for 1911 being $24,125.50 while estimated receipts for this year will be $36,000. Total receipts for the first three quarters of 1924 are $125,000. When Mr. Cunningham was appointed to the postmastership, March 22, 1913, there were 11 clerks and 11 city carriers connected with the local office, but because of business has nearly doubled the employed force during the 10 years. There are now 21 clerks and 16 city carriers.

Parcel Post Growth.
One of the features of Mr. Cunningham's term of office has been the astonishing growth of the parcel post system, which was inaugurated only a year before he took the position, and it is in some part responsible for the great growth in business here. The C. O. D. and insured departments have come in for a large share of the parcel post business and have helped raise receipts.

An historic change in postal communication, the start of the air-mail system last year, is one of the features of his efforts.

Evansville—There is a patriotic movement among the Women's clubs here and other organizations to interest the women of Evansville in election and induce them to come out and vote Nov. 4. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Uphoff spent the week-end in Cottage Grove with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wood, Mr. and Mrs. S. Strong, Beloit, and Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cotton en route home from a northern trip.

The Rev. O. W. Smith went to Oshkosh Tuesday where he will give a series of lectures on the administration of Mr. Cunningham's administration of most interest and probably of the greatest future importance.

Local Improvements.
A local improvement in service, obtained through the influence of Mr. Cunningham, is the third delivery of mail in the business district. Before his coming into office the downtown district had the same service as the residential district, twice daily.

Mr. Cunningham's term of service has extended through some of the most difficult years in local history, including the World war period, when great transportation problems arose, in addition to the war duties, especially the sale of war savings and thrift stamps, which were placed upon the postoffice department. The business revival, following the war, with the consequent increase in mail, came without warning, but was handled in a highly efficient and most satisfactory manner.

To Practice Law.
As soon as the business can be settled up and Mr. Mattheson takes office, Mr. Cunningham will return to the practice of law, establishing his office in the Carlo block, corner River and Milwaukee streets. He had practiced for 20 years prior to his appointment as postmaster, and will without doubt retain all who were former clients and draw many who have become acquainted with him through his official position in addition. He will leave the office with the satisfaction of having been postmaster during the time when the greatest improvement in the service has been inaugurated in Janesville by his efforts.

Matheson as Postmaster

Appointment of Alexander E. Matheson as postmaster at Janesville will give general satisfaction. The term of J. J. Cunningham expired in March and as he had been appointed as a demoralizer there was no hope that he would be given a term under the political aspect of the office. Mr. Matheson is a man with friends. That they have faith in him is evidenced by their election of him twice to the assembly. He has lived here most of his life since he came of age. He has been intimately associated with the development of the social, civic and political life of the city. There is another thing about the appointment outside of the office itself which will give satisfaction to the republicans of the whole state of Wisconsin beyond Janesville. It is the first emphatic recognition of the fact that the Third Party candidates are no longer entitled to be called republicans and to demand that they shall have patronage which, right or wrong, has been the custom with congressmen of the same party faith as the president for years. The First Congressional district having no republican congressman, any recommendations of the present incumbent may make are therefore of no weight or consideration.

The question as to whether women are qualified for places of authority has been answered ever since the Garden of Eden episode. In every home.

A Word to Martin Lueck

In the Declaration of Independence it was said, speaking of the king of England, "He has created a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance."

We have been gradually getting to the point, Judge Lueck, in Wisconsin where with boards and commissions and inspectors and petty office and job holders, we have about all we can stand. We have so "systematized" and bureaucratized the state government that we will have to quit business to take care of the system.

We started that game of getting more people on the payroll about the time we began to correct everything under heavens by legal process fictionally known as legislation.

There have been guilty parties who have not been followers after La Follette. We have had other kinds of statesmen in Wisconsin who have acquired the same ideas. But we have come to a place where this paternalism must be stopped, commissions be abolished, the work done now by the costly army, be transferred to departments under the constitution and that we get back to the people in truth and not in bunk.

If you, Judge Lueck, without any reservation, will help do that, you ought, in all reason, to get a lot of votes. The only reason Blaine has a following is that a number of editors are of the opinion that he will do what the senior senator from Wisconsin tells him. Mr. Severson, Mr. Dahl, Mr. Conings and others know he will not.

It may be said to you, Judge Lueck, at this time, that you have a great opportunity if you are elected governor. You have no strings tied to you. You will be elected by no party or faction but truly represent the people of the state. And if you are elected you will be expected to take immediate steps to relieve the state of Wisconsin of the "multitude of new offices and the swarms of officers who harass the people and eat out their substance," which was a part of the declaration of suffering people 148 years ago and started a victorious war for freedom from oppressive government.

About the hardest fighters in this campaign are the pacifists.

Useless Time and Money Spent on Constitutional Amendments

We are to vote on three amendments to the constitution in Wisconsin this year. Every one should be adopted. They represent the final presentation to the people of amendments out of a hopper-full, presented to the legislature in the last session. But under the Third Party plan of making an amendment to the constitution whereby the supreme court decisions may be overruled, all this voting would be done away with. We need only one amendment to the state constitution if we should put the Third Party abolition of supreme court authority into one amendment in Wisconsin. For instance, under that system, any one of the three amendments to the constitution could have been passed as an act of the legislature. Then as the supreme court would have been obliged to say that these acts were unconstitutional, all the legislature would have to do to make them into laws, would be to repass the acts. Presto! It is done. The constitution is amended and no expense to the state for an election referendum has been entailed.

For instance, again, we have been trying to raise the salaries, (or is it wages?) of the members of the legislature for the last twenty years. The people have voted it down. But if a legislature should pass an act providing for an increase in wages, say $2,000 a year for legislators, and the supreme court should deem it wise to overrule the express will of the people through their chosen representatives, and declare the act unconstitutional, all that would be necessary would be for the legislature to repass it, and legislators would be paid $2,000. It is simple.

The proposed 20th amendment to the constitution of the United States, advocated by the

RADIOING ELECTION RETURNS

By FREDERICK J. HANKIN.

Washington—The climax of the use of the radio in the 1924 campaign will come with the broadcasting of election returns on the night of November 4. If utilized to the limit of its possibilities more people will be directly in touch with the coming of the ballots this year than ever before in the history of the country.

The resonant voice that has grown so familiar during the past year will be heard in hundreds of thousands of homes, and loud speakers will carry it to countless other thousands of groups in theaters, halls and in front of the bulletin boards of newspapers.

"Empty-ump" predictions in New York cast empty-ump votes for Coolidge, empty-ump for Davis and empty-ump for La Follette," it will say. "The same predictions in 1920 gave empty-ump votes for Harding and empty-ump for Cox."

Then, presumptively, the voice will proceed to tell whether a gain or loss is shown for Coolidge or Davis, what the La Follette vote indicates, and which of the candidates will probably carry the state. And then the crowd will cheer and indulge in demonstrations proportionate to the enthusiasm with which they receive the returns.

Connected with the balloting statistics, as the evening grows older, will come the statements and claims of state and national chairmen and other party leaders.

"Chairman Butler, of the Republican National Committee, claims the election of Coolidge and Davies by an overwhelming vote. He says it is another landslide." Or, "Democratic National Chairman Shaver claims a safe majority in the electoral college for Davis and Bryan. He says the Democrats have carried more than half the electoral states, including New York and Indiana, and that the latter returns will make an even stronger showing for Davis."

Or, perhaps it will be: "Congressman John M. Nelson, chairman of the progressive campaign committee, refuses to concede the election of Coolidge. He says that Davis is out of it and that the amazing strength shown by La Follette and Wheeler points to the election of the progressive ticket by a narrow margin. The progressives have made great gains in both houses of congress, he claims."

It will be a stupendous task to organize and to carry through this projected service to the American people. It is not so difficult to broadcast a speech, or the proceedings of a political convention, or the play of a world's series baseball game, so that everybody who has a radio outfit, no matter how many miles away, gets it all almost as promptly and as vividly as the eye-witnesses of the events, or those who are listening to the speaker himself.

That is no simple task, but it can be done, and has been done, with wonderful efficiency. It is a matter of deciding on all contact stations and arranging for the relays. A speech, or a concert, or a single event that registers itself or that can be told about as it transpires, can be broadcast as far and as widely as the air will carry it.

But to tell the story of the result of an election as the result in being compiled is a different proposition. In that case the event is transpiring in 48 different states and in tens of thousands of voting places where the ballots are being counted. The returns must be assembled, tabulated—and compared.

It means little or nothing to tell an anxious nation that Cook county, Illinois, or a certain number of precincts in greater New York, cast a certain number of votes for each of the candidates for president. Expert mathematicians must take those returns and compare them with the vote cast four years ago, working out the percentage of gain or loss that each candidate shows, and from that estimating the probable final result in the state.

And the case of New York state, for further illustration, it does not suffice to know merely the percentages of gains or losses in New York City, which is normally a democratic stronghold. Similar calculations must be worked out on the returns from up-state counties where the republicans have their greatest strength, before the result in the state as a whole can be approximated.

Nor will the listening public be content to hear only what is happening in one or two of the more important states. There will be especial interest and anxiety over the returns from the west and northwest where La Follette is expected to show his greatest strength, and everybody will be keen to know what the returns from those sections indicate in connection with the general result.

The fact that there is a formidable third party in the field this year is a further complication that adds greatly to the difficulty of assembling election returns and interpreting them promptly and accurately. This will be doubly true if the election proves to be a run-away race of it as Harding did in 1920, or as Wilson did in 1912, it will be apparent at an early hour on election night that there can be no question as to the ultimate result and the public will not be clamorous for details.

However, it is possible that the result in a single state may suffice to determine whether any candidate is to have a majority in the electoral college, or if the choice of a president is to be thrown into the hands of congress, and it is always possible for the result in any one state to hinge upon the balloting in a few precincts.

It will not be forgotten soon that many politicians and most of the rank and file of the people went to bed on the night of the election in 1916 believing that Charles Evans Hughes, the republican candidate, had been elected president, whereas in fact the result in the nation hinged absolutely upon the result in California, and it was not until two or three days later that election bets were paid.

Some people insist that it is impossible to forecast the result of an election from the returns of a few scattering precincts, but practical politicians know that it can be done. George B. Cox, the famous republican boss of Cincinnati, always arranged to have the returns from two precincts in his city brought in to him at the earliest possible moment, and when he had them he was able to approximate with uncanny accuracy what the final returns for his city and county would show.

If the 1924 election returns are broadcast, as projected, the hour will come when one of the candidates will issue the traditional statement conceding the election of his opponent and declaring that he accepts the verdict of the American people. This suggests the story of the German who was telling how his brother was leading up under the loss of his wife. "Is he reconciled?" asked a friend. "Is he reconciled?" repeated the German. "Gott, he has to be."

Workers' Party, the Socialists, the Philosophical Anarchists in our colleges, the Gompers and the La Follettes, is that laws declared unconstitutional by the supreme court may be repassed and become in force thereupon. Their any law, no matter how much it might violate the constitutional limitations, could become a law without the people voting on it at all. The same principle in state government would apply. We would have no need to vote on amendments—just let the legislature pass them over a supreme court ruling after the court has acted. If it is good for the United States, it is good for Wisconsin.

JUST FOLKS

THE MAGIC OF AUTUMN

It's a glorious day with the sun overhead. And the maples off yonder in cardinal red. And the elms spilling gold on the floor of the world. And the sunnys ablaze as the picture's unfurled; Oh, poor little genius known as a man. Work you such wonders as this if you can!

It's a glorious day, with the magic of fall. Working its changes too swift for us all; Now the green turns to gold, in the glint of the sun. But not one of us knows how this marvel is done. From the high hat of autumn gay ribbons are tossed. And man merrily calls it the work of the frost.

Here's a performance which dazzles the eye! Here are hues that no painter could try! Valley and hill top and forest and field, In garments of beauty are strongly revealed; Oh, who can detect it, or who can explain. Or what can equal such legendariness?

The world is the stage, without curtain or wing. Where autumn performs for the peasant and king; No velvet-topped table he needs for his feast. As he scatters his silver and gold on the feast; We see the scenes change in the glint of the sun.

But none of us knows how such wonders are done. (Copyright, 1924, by Edgar A. Guest.)

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1924

Mieled good and evil may be expected from this day's planetary direction, according to astrology. Although "Crucible" Sun, Mercury and Venus are all in benefic aspect, Mars and Neptune are in adverse.

There is again the sign read as indicating deep interest in the army and navy with many changes and reinforcements.

Diplomacy, born on this day to the test before much time has passed, for there is again a sign read as presaging international complications.

Peace will appear in places on the globe that have been long disturbed, but there will be outbreaks of war in other places.

General activity of the youth in defense sort will be general under this sway of the stars, which indicates some cause for national excitement.

The seers declare that Americans are blind to world conditions and care-free when they should be assuming responsibility in international affairs.

Once more the tide of romance and sentiment is rising and it forecasts drama affecting all the people.

Both men and women may be exceedingly foolish in their conduct at this time when the stars affect the common sense side of the brain.

Divorces will continue to multiply and there will be even more contempt than formerly for the sanctity of marriage.

Children born on this day will be fond of company and able to enjoy the good things of life, while they prosper in their work. These subjects of Scorpio are usually exceedingly neat and very fond of dress.

THAT'S THE TROUBLE

"There are obstacles, seemingly trivial, but none the less, prevent us from the women voters," says Sarah Schuyler Butler in the November Scribner's Magazine. "These arise from the vagaries of the human character. A very wise politician told us that, in his country, it was difficult to persuade the women to the polls to vote, because they hadn't time to get dressed up." Apparently the men go to the polls in overalls or working clothes, but feminine vanity decries that the women must put on their best dresses and hats before they start on such an important errand. "There is still another difficulty," this same politician explained to us. "Frequently on Election Day the farmers take a day off. They leave home early in the morning, drive to the polling place, cast their ballot, and stay until dark talking to their friends and discussing the political situation. As a result the women of their families have no chance whatever to vote even if they wish to do so. As we pursued our investigations it was astonishing to find on what trifling considerations the success or failure of a political organization in getting out its voters may depend."

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO
October 28, 1884—The Blaine and Logan Invincibles went to Clinton on a special train to fight the ten-day republican rally there. This is the last excursion of the campaign. The plug hat brigade did not attend as a body, but a large number accompanied the Invincibles.

THIRTY YEARS AGO
October 28, 1894—Four men, who are believed to have been responsible for a number of robberies from creameries in this section were arrested in Deloit this morning by Marshal W. H. Appleby, after an all-night pursuit. They had taken $105 worth of butter from the Allen's Grove creamery during the evening.

TWENTY YEARS AGO
October 28, 1904—The entire city was in mourning today for the funeral of Marshal Corcoran. All stores were closed. The funeral cortege, consisting of over 50 carriages, was more than a mile in length. Services were conducted at St. Patrick's church with the Rev. J. J. McGinly officiating.

TEN YEARS AGO
October 28, 1914—Following the completion of the new gymnasium, gymnasium, swimming pool, bowling alley, banquet and reception hall and lobby of the Y. M. C. A., a new man, R. C. MacAnzie, to act as associate secretary to J. C. Klein, arrived here yesterday. He was formerly a state Sunday school worker.

PROTEIN
The old Greeks must have been very fond of grubbing for roots and herbs. Among the many English words derived from Greek roots or verbs is protein which is extracted from a Greek verb meaning "to take first place." As we all consume more or less protein at every meal, we know a lot about it. Every living thing contains protein. Plants build their own protein out of the elements or materials in soil or air. Animals and man must get their protein in food. There are a great many different proteins recognized by physiologists—nearly a hundred—and the different proteins have varying biological value or utility as food, but the common characteristic which distinguishes proteins from other food materials and body materials is the nitrogen which enters into the construction of the protein molecule. Besides nitrogen, all proteins contain hydrogen, oxygen, carbon and sulphur, and many contain phosphorus and iron. The nitrogen is the outstanding element. Protein is commonly called "nitrogenous" food or body materials or waste material, and protein is the building material, no protein, no repair. Well, for that matter, no protein, no life.

Protein is building material. Naturally some building materials are very good and some are very poor. The protein of egg (egg albumin or white of egg) is one of the perfect ones—normal nutrition and growth may be maintained on egg albumin as the only protein material in the diet. The proteins of milk are perfect, too—lactalbumin, which forms a "curd" when milk is acidulated, and casein, which makes up the curd—milk as the source of protein being adequate for normal growth and nutrition of man and animals. The protein of wheat, which is very valuable, then egg or milk protein, though it will maintain normal growth and nutrition in animals. The chief protein of corn, which is not so good as egg or milk protein, to maintain normal growth of young animals. The protein obtained from bones, cartilage or gristle, hides and hoofs, is a protein, but supports neither growth nor nutrition. When fed as the sole protein in the diet, it would be a rather difficult to select a plain or simple menu which does not contain enough protein. The physiologists tell us that the daily need of the body of an adult in need is around 210 grams of protein. Perhaps the average growing boy or girl of 12 years requires more than the full grown adult. Certainly the active boy or girl from 12 to 18 needs more food than the average father of mother does.

There is no particular reason to associate protein in the diet or assumed disturbance or fault of protein metabolism in the body, with nephritis (Bright's disease), and no reason to believe that the protein of persons with nephritis must avoid meats or "red meats."

$7,000,000 FROM MOTOR LICENSES

(By Associated Press.) Madison—Nearly 7,000,000 have been collected during the first 10 months of the present year from motor vehicle license fees, according to the annual report of the automobile division of the secretary of state's office.

POSTPONE HEARING ON PHONE RATES

Indefinite Adjournment Is Announced by Railroad Commission.

Scheduled to have been held in Madison today, the adjourned hearing on telephone rates in several cities in Wisconsin, including Janesville, was postponed indefinitely in order to give all parties involved additional time to prepare their cases. City Attorney Roger G. Cunningham received notification of the adjournment from the railroad commission.

The first hearing in regard to the petition of the Wisconsin Telephone company to increase rates in Janesville was held at the city hall on Oct. 17. At the close of that session, it was announced that an adjourned hearing would be held at Madison on Oct. 25. Mr. Cunningham is expected to appear in the interests of the city when the postponed hearing is held.

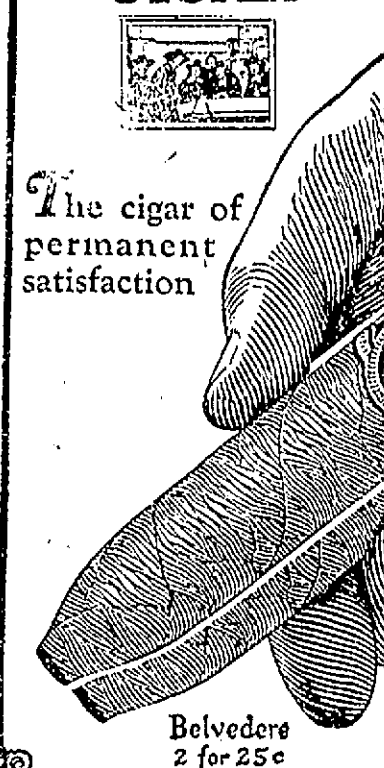

The railroad commission was occupied at Madison Tuesday in hearing evidence in regard to its own petition for changing the accounting system for city water departments. While Janesville would be affected should a change be ordered, the matter was not considered of sufficient importance to send representatives from this city to attend the hearing. Opinion of officials here is that a change in the bookkeeping plan is unwarranted.

WASTE IS CHARGED BY LUECK AT FORT

State Administration Is Assailed by Judge in Campaign Speech.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Fort Atkinson—Charges of waste and extravagance were made against the present state administration by Judge Martin J. Lueck, democratic candidate for governor, speaking here Monday night.

"Taxation has grown to the point where it is almost unbearable and we know the agencies of government in Wisconsin are being utilized to further personal ambition to the detriment of the people of the state," Judge Lueck declared. "We charge the Blaine administration with waste and extravagance in the administration of our public affairs and we indict that administration with the operation of a political machine, manipulated to further the ambitions of certain men."

"The charge is not original with us. It was made long before we opened the democratic state campaign. Many progressive republicans say that conditions in Madison are so rotten that there ought to be a house cleaning from cellar to garret. If given the opportunity, the democratic ticket will see that the hopes of these progressives are fulfilled.

"In the last 20 years the population of Wisconsin has increased only one quarter and during the same period the cost of government has increased from five to seven times. You can't justify it on that ground. The valuation of property during that time has little more than doubled. The burden of direct taxation in Wisconsin is greater than it is in any of the six adjoining states, and then we don't give Wisconsin credit for increased revenues from income taxes and inheritance taxes."

TICKETS AVAILABLE FOR RECITAL NOV. 5
Tickets for the free recital at the high school, Nov. 5, by Glenn Ellison, baritone, and Alva Hill, pianist, may be obtained at Mackenzie Music shop on Milwaukee street. Permission to use the high school auditorium for the free concert was obtained by Mr. Mackenzie, under whose auspices the artists appear here.

OUTDOOR FRIENDS HEAR SKAVLEM

Pageant of the Birds and Talks on Koshkonong Mounds.

More than 125 friends of our native landscape enjoyed a beautiful outing at the H. L. Hoad cottages on Lake Koshkonong last Saturday afternoon, Oct. 25. The occasion was the annual autumnal meeting, known as the "Falling Leaf" gathering of the Wisconsin branch of the national organization of nature lovers. Members and their families were in attendance from Madison, Janesville, Stoughton, Port Atkinson, Jefferson, Hartford, Burlington, Lake Mills, and Milwaukee.

Ideal Indian summer weather made the event one of the most successful in the history of the club. Carloads of "friends" bringing with them their picnic baskets loaded with "goodies," began to arrive late in the afternoon. Picnic tables and campers' stoves on the shaded shore of Koshkonong made the sheltered spot most desirable for an outdoor dining hall.

Early in the afternoon, President John S. Donald, Madison, opened the meeting with a few remarks and called upon H. L. Skavlem, the John Burroughs of Koshkonong, to make a few words of welcome. Mr. Skavlem called attention to the fact that Koshkonong is the center of Indian lore, and that on its 25 miles of shoreline are to be found more than 500 Indian mounds.

These mounds, he said, were built to resemble birds of the air, water fowl, panthers, and turtles. He told of the immense size of some of the mounds and described a few of the contents. He related a little about the early history of Lake Koshkonong, and told how a steam boat from St. Louis had once navigated the lake, and of the dreams of engineers that this body of water would some day occupy a prominent place in commercial navigation, dreaming which never came true.

Following Mr. Skavlem's talk, Franz A. Aust, Madison, secretary of the club, explained in a few words the purpose of the organization to preserve the beauties of nature, and to encourage the study of the wonders of Mother Nature.

The Koshkonong Bird Congress, a beautiful pageant, written by Annie Kamden Main, well-known bird authority and nature lover of Port Atkinson, was charmingly presented in the natural amphitheater afforded by the wooded bank on the shore of the lake. While visiting Mr. Skavlem and studying with him the beauties of Lake Koshkonong bird life, Mrs. Main explained the plot for the pageant.

A procession of birds and their families formed the opening scene. Next came the naturalist and a young bird student. They made themselves acquainted with the birds, and related their habits and history. Two interesting scenes in the pageant added color and grace to the scene. One was an Indian dance in full costume, presented by Gabe McIntosh, full-blooded Menominee Indian, and his four-year-old son. The other was an interpretation of the "Spirit of the Woodland," charmingly given by Frances Fairweather, niece of Port Atkinson.

Pageant Characters.
Characters in the pageant were represented by Port Atkinson young people. Miss Ruth Schiffer took the part of the bird student; Charles Wadsworth, the naturalist; and school children, the bird characters. The pageant was directed by Miss Margaret Shedd, English teacher in the Port Atkinson school.

The committee in charge of arrangements and entertainment for the program consisted of the following: Port Atkinson people, Mrs. H. A. (Aunt) K. Main, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rogers, Jr., and Mrs. H. O. Chaswell, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Robt. Coe, Jr., and Mrs. Bennett, Mr. and
